Shoot, I'm not even aware of a reliable chart on those numbers The Pearl Jupiter SDs of the 70s (with a parallel throw-off) were EXCELLENT sounding drums, but NEVER command the money of Ludwig Supraphonics or Super-Sensitives.

Yamaha don't even keep records of the serial numbers they put on their drums! The only way to tell the age of a Yamaha kit is by looking at the drums themselves and seeing what type of lugs, badge, etc they have and using those to date the drum to somewhere in probably a 5 year range.. Yours looks to have a better throw-off than the ones I had Do you have a Supra? If so, how does this compare side-by-side?.

I deal mostly with the 70s era Pearl, and they didn't have serial numbers so I've never seriously concerned myself about the 80s serial numbers.. Based upon the style of badge, I'd say early-to-mid 80s That drum actually isn't a bad drum, but my experience with them is that IF you get $75 out of it you'll be doing good. I have only played Ludwigs prior to getting this one I thought it was weird that it has no muffler on it, is that typical of Pearls?I've only handled a couple of these.. The Jupiters (which I have and use a 6 5x14, new in 1978) had internal tone controls, basically the same ones available new now.. I don't know about Pearl serial numbers on drums, but if they are like Yamaha drums they mean nothing as I found out when I talked to Yamaha when trying to date my kit (between 1992 and some time later in the 90s). e828bfe731 تنزيل برنامج انترنت داونلود مانجر كامل مجانا
